Internship Opportunities

The Full Frame Initiative (FFI) is a national nonprofit organization that works to break cycles of poverty and violence through systems change. In partnership with practical visionaries in government, nonprofits, research and communities, FFI documents and advances, and removes barriers to, the “Full Frame Approach”—the principles and practices common to community-based organizations with a proven track record of helping people and communities facing multiple challenges (poverty, violence, mental illness, addiction, homelessness, etc.) to thrive.

Opportunities with FFI

FFI is a young and growing organization with seasoned and entrepreneurial leadership. We welcome applicants for academic year internships and inquiries about possible Summer 2014 internship openings.

Immediate: For Fall Semester 2013

The Full Frame Initiative has an exciting project documenting how different stakeholder groups (policy makers, funders, practitioners and survivors) understand success for domestic violence survivors. This project is one of a kind! Instead of focusing on programs and services, we are unearthing groundbreaking information about how these different groups frame success more broadly, in the context of survivor’s whole lives. We capture this information primarily through appreciative inquiry workshops. Collecting this data will allow for an analysis of where the current system could be improved in order to better address survivors’ needs.

We are seeking a smart, dynamic intern to support this project. Primary responsibilities include transcribing workshop tapes, writing up workshop notes, and compiling workshop materials. Interest in domestic violence, public policy and systems reform a plus.

Internships are based out of our Greenfield office, with the opportunity to do some or all of the work remotely, depending on the project. Stipends are available. College credit may be available depending on the requirements of your college or university.

Thesis Projects

We also encourage students to consider FFI for a capstone project or senior thesis to complement their academic studies. Our organization focuses on many social issues—there are a wide array of possibilities for a qualified candidate to conduct and assist with some timely and substantial research and analysis.

Qualifications

Our organization and work is of particular interest to, and could benefit from, those studying psychology, public policy, sociology, economics, government, or a related social science field. Strong writing and communication skills are a must for any position, as are excellent organizational and time management skills.

Candidates for internships at FFI must be enrolled in a college or university. If you are a recent graduate, please do not apply for an internship. Non-students are welcome to inquire about possible volunteer opportunities with our organization. Please e-mail learn-more@fullframeinitiative.org. Thank you.
